

Puzzle No. 001:

Professor Layton and the Guided Tour of the Private Institute

*A great institution isn't just its buildings; it's the people who work there too.
Something's not quite right about this tour guide, though.*

Walk past some vending machines near where you received this puzzle. A glass plaque commemorates a career of studying people's attitudes and feelings. (3 → 6)

Just up the stairs, another plaque is hodor hodor hodor hodor hodor hodor. (10 → 1)

Turn around and find your way to MIT's longest hallway. Halfway down it, there's a lobby with a view of the Boston skyline. An engraving here honors an old MIT president; apparently these buildings are an adorable dedication to his memory. (12 → 4 9)

Keep going, but turn left at a staircase before you reach a vaulted ceiling. Walk all the way down this hallway, then proceed to the nearest exit to the outdoors. The professor honored here taught classes for summoning high winds and rain dancing. Also, his parents were cyborgs? (11 8 → 5 2)

Cross the courtyard just outside the doors. (It's okay; you can hurry without missing anything.) Once inside, you'll see a plaque for a joker who funded buildings to arrive at chemistry itself... whatever that means. (7 → 2)

Walk forward until you see a stairwell and a mural of animals, then turn left. A third of the way to your starting point, you'll be able to use what you've learned to find out what to do next.
