

Central Square

Back to Square One

Or, more accurately, back and forth. Like oxen plowing a field.

Each row of this puzzle contains three entries, placed end to end. Also, the grid will be divided into rectangular fields, so that the answers to the Field clues can be read in the fields boustrophedon, which is to say, alternating left-to-right and right-to-left in successive rows, starting in the upper left corner, as in the examples on the right. Each Field entry will begin in a square marked with a black circle. Some squares will not be used in any field.
