

Two if by Sea

Listen as well to this verse, because
 It describes the ride of William Dawes,
 Who on seeing the lamps in the church numbered twain
 (Not alert Mr. Clemens, but two), grabbed his rein,
 Bit and saddle, and (thinking his horse was an ass)
 Stole a fish and then rode it to Lexington, Mass.

William Dawes's dramatic midnight ride on fishback, of course, has been commemorated ever since through the tradition of stealing fish from the Massachusetts State House.

To solve this puzzle, modify each sentence by inserting one fish into its underlined word; then match each modified sentence on one side to a modified sentence on the other side that contradicts it. (The two sentences that have already been modified are not a matched pair.) One fish in each matched pair will contain an R or B as appropriate (colorwise) for its side; this letter's position indicates what letter to select from the other fish in the pair.
