

This is a location puzzle; you may not be able to solve this if you move on to another location. You will not need to travel outside a 1-block radius of Greene-Rose Heritage Park.

1. No pair of animals with adjacent fence panels placed immediately next to each other in the race.
2. Sawyer, Siouxsie, and Sophie all had at least two other animals between them in the race order.
3. The elephant placed fifth, and Sawyer came in last. The squirrel did not place seventh.
4. The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Middlesex County and The Duck of Standard Attractiveness are a frog and a duck, respectively. The Diligent Feller of Birches has an unusual tail.
5. Cameron and Sawyer hatched from eggs.
6. Amelia, the rabbit, placed after the beaver but before the panda.
7. Sophie placed immediately after Delphia, and was immediately followed by the duck.
8. The Doggedly Watchful Listener takes after their uncle Horton, and The Nemesis of Vacuum Cleaners Everywhere was inspired by their cousin Ulysses. (Neither Ulysses nor Horton raced.)
9. Jameson's favorite food can be found hidden in his epithet.
10. The first three winners were all herbivores and crossed the finish line in order from largest to smallest.
11. The Great Bamboozler, The Looming Swamp Trekker, and The Nemesis of Vacuum Cleaners Everywhere all have seven letters in their names.
12. No animal's placement in the race was the same as the number of letters in their type of animal.
13. The rabbit and the beaver were adjacent to each other in the race results, in some order.
14. Mathias is heavier than Amelia, Jameson and Delphia together.
15. The Real Not Velveteen is not the moose.
16. The four female animals all placed together in a row, and none placed first.

	Amelia	Cameron	Delphia	Jameson	Mathias	Sawyer	Siouxsie	Sophie	beaver	duck	elephant	frog	moose	panda	rabbit	squirrel	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Middlesex County
The Diligent Feller of Birches
The Doggedly Watchful Listener
The Duck of Standard Attractiveness
The Great Bamboozler
The Looming Swamp Trekker
The Real Not Velveteen
The Nemesis of Vacuum Cleaners Everywhere
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8 beaver duck elephant
frog
moose panda rabbit squirrel																								